HKU in Shanghai

HKU has increased significantly its academic collaborations and projects on the Mainland in recent years and has also built a much wider network of partner universities for student exchange and academic collaboration.

With the opening of the HKU Shanghai Study Centre in 2008, HKU has strengthened its Mainland presence and the Study Centre is becoming an icon for learning and knowledge exchange.

The Shanghai Study Centre is a four-storey building located at the historical Post Office Building at No. 298, Beisuzhou Road, Hongkou District (上海虹口区北苏州路298号), at the north end of the Sichuan Road Bridge, which spans Suzhou Creek.

It houses the Faculty of Architecture, Faculty of Business and Economics, and the Journalism and Media Studies Centre. It was made possible with the generous support of Mr Chung Kin-kwok in 2007.
The Faculty of Architecture occupies two floors of the Study Centre for use as a teaching venue. Every Architecture undergraduate in Hong Kong will go to the Study Centre for a semester in order to learn the culture and architectural designs of Shanghai. The Faculty also plans to arrange for students to participate in community projects in Shanghai.

The Journalism and Media Studies Centre aims to pursue excellence in journalism and fostering Asian voices in the international media. With the facilities at the Study Centre, it can hold academic conferences and forums to nurture future media professionals.

The Faculty of Business and Economics opened its office to students in November 2010. Since the launch of the Master of Business Administration (International) programme (IMBA), co-organised by HKU and Fudan University 12 years ago, the programme now has more than 2,600 graduates. The Study Centre will be an exclusive dynamic platform for the Faculty’s alumni, students and teaching staff to interact and to learn; to confront new facts; break new grounds; and find creative ways to solve problems. The Centre can be a place for lectures, seminars, exhibitions, study groups and social events too.

「通過香港大學上海教育中心的學習，港大希望讓學生汲取不同地域文化，開闊視野。建築學院作為一個對外實踐基地，每一位本科生都必須從香港來到上海，在這裡接受為期一個學期的沉浸式教育。新聞及傳媒研究中心將成為學術交流的平台，令學生面向中國內地的傳媒和學術界。」
